U.S. Jobless Rate Hits A 7½-Year High Point

By Frank C. Porter

WASHINGTON, Dec. 4 WP .- Unemployment in the United States rose from 5.6 to 5.8 percent of the labor force in Novemberthe highest level in seven and a half years and the fifth straight nonthly increase.

Much of the rise-hut not all of it-came from the 67-day shutdown at General Motors, the world's largest manufacturing company, said Assistant Commissioner of Labor Statistics Harold Goldstein. He said, however, that "we have no real way of measuring" the full impact of the strike.

The President's Conneil of Economic Advisers took a stab at it anyway. It estimated that without the strike, unemployment would have been somewhere between 5,3 and 5,5 percent, a range below the 5.5 percent rate in September, before the walkout hegan.

CEA Estimate on GM Strike Effect

The CEA figured that the walkout idled hetween 750,000 and one million Americans directly and indirectly. Of this number, some 350,000 were GM strikers, who are not counted as unemployed. The rest were accounted for by layoffs in the auto industry itself, in supplier industries and in husinesses generally afferted by slowed economic activity at-tributable to the waikout. These contributed up to 0.5 percentage point of the jobless total, the CEA estimated.

The council also forecast that the GM strike would reduce the gross national product in the October-December quarter by about $10 billion

Egypt Accuses U.S. of Spying

CAIRO, Dec. 4 (UPI).—Egypt accused the United States today military intelligence for Israel.

"The function of the American planes was not to respect the special arrangements for the ceasefire, but was aimed at obtaining military information about Egyptian positions in Israel's interest," Egypt said.

The complaint came in a government memorandum delivered to Donald Bergus, the U.S. repre-sentative to Cairo, by Foreign Undersecretary Salah Gobar during their meeting today.

In these talks, Mr. Bergus said the United States had suspended the U-2 flights and had "no intentions at present to resume' them, the memorandum said.

It said, "It was understood from this reply that the United States gives itself the right to resume these overflights in the future." "The actions of the United States in sending its aircraft over our territory is nothing but an aggressive act aimed at serving the objectives of the enemy," it

Mideast Movement

The broad understanding Israel is seeking with the United States before resuming peace talks with the Arabs is in the interest of both countries. Premier Golda Meir's lengthy letter to President Nixon and the visit to Washington next week by Defense Minister Moshe Dayan signify that Israel is on the verge of returning to the talks, as the United States has asked

Mr. Dayan has been taking the lead in niging Israei's divided coalition government to resume negotiations through the UN mediator, Ambassador Jarring. His shift from hawk to dove reflects a swing in this direction on the part of Israeli public opinion, as well as within the government.

Resumption of hostilities along the canal, after four months of trace, is something both Israelis and Egyptians seem desirous of avoiding. Talks are essential if the ceasefire is to continue beyond its current Feb. 5

Mr. Dayan's much-discussed "plan" is to start by solidifying the cease-fire with a thin-out of military forces on both sides of the waterway, perhaps reopening it for commerce. He also has urged Israelis to lower their sights. They will have to settle. he said, for less than the "binding" peace

This view appears to be becoming that of the Israell cabinet as a wbole. But there are some reasonable concerns: the Soviet-Egyptian missile violations, the brief civil war in Jordan and the huge buildup of Soviet arms and military advisers in Egypt. Negotlations will be much more difficult now that every projected element of agreement will have to be examined on the assumption that the Egyptians will violate it if it serves their interest.

The United States has never favored an "imposed" settlement, nor even a detailed plan to be banded to the parties by the Big Four. Unless the parties themselves negotiate the terms and freely enter into a compact, no peace settlement will be worth the paper it is written on.

If Israel is to hand back vast territories to the Arabs in return for promises of peace and use of international waterways, extensive guarantees will be required in the terms of the settlement, in the United Nations peacekeeping arrangements and in American support. Assurances of that support now will advance both the negotiations and the settlement the United States seeks in its own interest and in the interest of world peace.

Public Opinion and Inflation

the Council of Economic Advisers notably sharpens the economic choices that the country must make. The time has come, the council says in effect, to reverse the anti-inflationary slowdown in the economy. Monetary and fiscal policy have been geared to a resumption of growth and a sobstantial increase in employment. But this hopeful prospect is threatened by the continoed upward pressure of prices and wages. The fear is that wage-price inflation will either slow down the recovery or lead to built-in escalation of living costs that will benefit no one.

In the council's language, "the general price level tends to rise by the excess of wage increases over productivity increases. Productivity cannot be counted on for long to rise more than about 3 percent per year. although this rate will probably be exceeded during the next year. This means that a continuing rate of increase of employee compensation per hour of 7 percent per year would commit the economy to a continuing inflation rate of about 4 percent."

It is on this basis that the council criticizes the inflationary wage settlements in the construction and automobile industries and an emergency board's recommendations for railroad employees. To "embody in wage agreements covering two or three future years provision for wage increases which assume that prices will continue to rise at recent peak rates," the report points out, "is not a reasonable response to our present situation. If it were done generally it would be a recipe for permanent rapid inflationand also for persistent unemployment, because the government would be bound to try

The second "inflation alert" issued by to check the inflation by generally restrictive policies. The community as a whole cannot make itself richer by raising prices and wages more rapidly."

> The council acknowledges that there is some unfairness in urging that new wage increases be smaller than those already consummated. But this is unavoidable if the inflationary spiral is not to continue endlessly. The council notes that workers as well as the poblic at large have an interest in moderation. During the third quarter of 1970 for example, first-year wage adjustments in the construction industry amounted to 22.1 percent, But the unemployment rate in construction was also high-11.9 percent. More than 500,000 construction workers benefited from wage increases in the first nine months of 1970, but 324,000 men were idle in that industry. The high cost of building resulting from these wage increases as well as from higher material costs and interest rates undoubtedly contributed to the slowdown, to the disadvantage of the unemployed as well as those needing hous-council's admonition is directed against "too-rapid increases of profit margins" as well as excessive wage settlements. The recent increases in the price of crude be has a second term, and where he oll and other commodities also come in for criticism. Whether or not this appeal to reason will have any restraining effect remains to be seen. If there is no response to the CEA's educational efforts, the country tion and the present lame-duck will have to choose between more drastic governmental action and resigning itself to living costs perpetually on the rise.

NATO and Berlin

It is dangerous for an alliance as strong as NATO to allow itself to be misunderstood. This year, for once, the NATO ministers have sald three things that needed saying and have said them clearly. The first is that American troops must and will stay in Europe and that the European commitment to NATO must and will be reinforced. The second is that NATO wants to discuss "mutual and balanced" force reductions with the Warsaw Pact countries. The third is that these discussions cannot begin until the Russians behave more reasonably over

The third message must be taken (by the Russlans) to be NATO's considered assessment of the state and importance of the Berlin negotiations, where the Russians are showing a mysterious diplomatic languor and appear to be blocking agreement.

-From the Guardian (London). * * *

Is France playing into the hands of Germany? Germany increases her role in NATO so much that she becomes its real European leader. This is the consequence of the French withdrawal from the organization.

The major financial contribution of Germany, added to the important number of Bundeswehr troops and the strategic importance of West German territory, makes Bonn the real pillar of the Atlantic alliance in Europe instead of France. And Chancellor Brandt consequently becomes the privileged partner of the United States in addition to being that of Moscow.

Even with a moderate contribution, the French government could have exercised a great influence within the European defense

Never had Dr. Caetano spoken so carnestly as when he assured the country that people who were shocked by the idea of autonomy for the overseas provinces were wrong. Dr. Caetano's proposed colonial legislation

WASHINGTON.—There is a much closer together personally and break in the rbythm of the government now. The President is working quietly behind the headlines on the next budget, which will carry him through 1971 and almost up to the nominating cooventions of 1972. It is too early to say that he is changing the policles of his first two years in office, but be is clearly reviewing and modifying them, and looking to

For example, in the next couple of years the United States will be faced with the delicate problems of making peace in Vietnam, influencing the peace talks in the Middle East, a strategic arms treaty with the Soviet Union; dealing with the rising pressure to bring Communist China into the world diplomatic community and reappraising the nation's military, eccucacic and political commitments to Latin America, Europe

Challenging Era

The rest of Nixon's term, in short, promises to be a period of historic revision, for we are coming into another of those challenging phases like the last half of the 1940s, when the policies of the past are inadequate to the problems of the present, and the nations have another chance to work toward a more dependable world

As Presidents Truman and Eisenhower discovered in the first critical postwar years, the movement away from war and anarchy had to be taken by the United States and could not be taken without trust between the executive and legislative branches of the govertment in Washington. It was this imperative need for trust that produced the great experiment in bipartisan or conpartisan foreign policy in the days of Achesoo, Vancentery, Lovett, McCloy and John Foster Dulles, and this experiment, in turn, led to the creation of the United Nations, a stronger inter-American security system, the Marshall Plan, NATO and the restoration of Western Eu-

The EEC, in accepting Britain as a member, would therefore be taking on a new kind of risk, one that could threaten monetary stabilhealth. Right now the Six see worrying signs of an uncontrolled inflation that could again weaken the British payments surplus.

The logical thing would be for the negotiators to talk about the problem, and to explore new ways of sharing Britain's reserve currency responsibility. But talking in this publicized forum might itself make the bolders of sterling nervous and advance the crisis one sought to avoid.

Artists and the Infinite

By Max Wykes-Joyce

LONDON, Dec. 4.—Under the title "Three Towards Infinity" the Arts Council of Great Britain is presenting, at the Whitechapel Art Gallery, High Street, E.1., a gigantic compilation of multiples of many different kinds. Originally suggested by Biddy Peppin and Pamela Zoline for the London Arts Laboratory, the idea soon outgrew the site, ann has had to await the larger spaces that the Whitechapel provides. The title is by way of being an homage to Marcel Duchamp. who opined that one of a thing was unique, and two of a thing a pair, but three of a thing was the beginning of mass production. By very definition, a multiple is something which can be produced in quantity; and here, it must be said, are many different kinds of objects, many of which emphasize the object and the craft, rather than the art of the matter

I also liked Julio le Parc's silver and red "Continual Mobile:" a construction of prisms by Rory McEwen, "Moonshine;" Michael McKin-non's kinetic "Tuoblediscs;" a "Miniature Soft Drum Set" by Claes Oldenburg; graphics by Rosenquist; three photoprints from a series 'Power and Beauty" by Colin Self, respectively of a whale, a motorcar, and a peacock; Andy Warhol's "Cow" wallpaper; and a number of mixed media works in a series of "Landscapes" which are not landscapes at all, by Tadanori Yokoo.

Salvador Dali

'I Am a Mediocre Painter

By Michael Gibson

DARIS. - "Some day." said Salvador Dali, at the end of a visit, "we must have a conversation of greater density." Is it really possible to have a conversation with Dali? No doubt, if he would consent to come down off his cloud.

"I am not crazy," he tells his neighbors in Figueras, Spain, where he was born, "it's the other people who are crazy." He may be right about that, and also he is no doubt entitled to waste his talent behaving and performing as people expect him to do.

One person who stands up for Dali's integrity is American businessman A. Reynolds Morse who is presently traveling with him in his capacity of friend, mentor, chief collector (he and Mrs. Morse own over 400 works by Dali) and unremunerated Marshal of the Court.

Museums

Mr. Morse is creating a Dali Museum in Cleveland, Ohio, which will be inaugurated in March and house the entire Morse collection. Work also began last month on another Dali Museum, this one in Dali'e birthplace, Figueras, and it should be completed in some 18 months. The museum will be housed in an ancient building bombed out during the Spanish Civil War, which is due to be restored and covered with a geodesic dome designed by Spanish architect Emilio Perez Piñero. The "conversation" with Dali had been no conversation at all, but a free-wheeling monologue on his part. In the baroque clutter of his hotel suite overlooking the Tuileries gardens, he sat signing a sheaf of several hundred engravings for his Parisian publisher and holding court for a regular flow of callers.

Dali reached for the phone: "Parrierrirroom service," he intoned, glancing sidelong at his visitor to measure the effect of his whimsy. Having given his order he turned back and amiably, almost hesitantly, started on his routine,

"Dali," he said, lapsing, as ha occasionally does, into the third person, "is becoming increasing-Jy monarchical."

Expianations were forthcoming, but, Dali having slipped his mind out of gear and his English being in a bad state of disrepair, they were hard to

After a while we reached amoother terrain in French. Art, he declared, is going to disappear. Already it has become reduced to such minimal expression that it can go no further without vanishing entirely. Then its place will ba taken by architecture. And within architecture it will ultimately make its comeback by way of ornamentation.

"I am a mediocre painter." he went on to say, "but I am a genlus."

"Why do you call yourself a mediocre painter?"

"I am a man of my century. Nobody knows how to paint nowadays. Compared to Velas-quez for instance I am mediocre. But compared to all the other. painters of our day I am of coursa the best."

And what about his genius? As he sees it, he has almost visionary foreknowledge. He anticipated the return of the monarchy in Spain, he foresaw the day when painters would reproduce pictures from the comic books. His methodical delirium is prophetic.

Visitors

At this point a young woman and two young men, one of them a priest, walked in and atood nodding shyly. The young men introduced one another and the girl and all three sat down in a row on the edga of the sofa. After some consultation one of the young men pointed to his priest companion, who looked somewhat like a younger brother of Sir Andrew Aguecheek, and said:

"Father 'Aguecheck,' here, is particularly interested in sur-realism and was eager to meet you and talk with you."

"Ah," said Dali, "you are a Catholic priest? I have here an as yet unpublished document which will interest you and which establishes that Jesus Christ was the twin brother of the Virgin Mary."

He produced the document and the young priest nodded respectfully without ever saying a word.

"As you know it sometimes happens that one twin is incorporated in the other. This accounts for the virgin birth. When Christ finally emerged from the Virgin he had a full beard. He was spared the trauma of birth and this may be why he had such exceptional osvehic powers."

A Critic

The talk was interrupted by the arrival of a Parisian art critic who came with a steno-typist in tow. The critic sat down good-humoredly facing Dali and primed the pump. "Salvador Dali." he said, "why have you decided to have yourself deep-frozen (after death)?" "I am doing it," said Dali, "to bug the people in a certain cafe in Figures. What these people think is extremely im-portant to me. They will say: He is dead, but he did not die like everyone else." We were off again on a oneman brainstorming court listened sole Dali rambled on. The Perpignan s tion is the center verse.

discovery, at least in the salesrooms, of se Walter Sickert, Walter Greaves or rawhall is recent. So too is the new of that American expatriate James vicNeill Whistler, who was "British" to be elected president of the Royal f British Artists in 1886—he spent two France before settling in London in ere he lived until his death in 1903. ; work is, for convenience's sake, inauctions of British art both here in und on the Continent-where sales of y American art are virtually nonexisor the British artists are, on the whole, saible exception is the work of Whistler, just beginning to sell in the $20,000-toacket. A very fine portrait of a girl ristie's sale has been estimated at $12,000 It is a preparatory sketch (25 inches inches), in brown touches sparingly ie canvas. In the corner are three blobs with Whistler's butterfly signature out-of similar importance by one of the mch masters, for instance, Lebasqueak of paintings by the much overpriced rould be worth much more. This is .ay be argued that Whistler's work and us British contemporaries has not yet the proper financial level. And yet Whistler's preparatory oil study to be sold next week at Christie's.

Paintings by other lesser British masters who turned out some very pleasant work are far below the Whistler price level.

William McTaggart (1835-1910) is a typical case of a time painter who has been disregarded because he doesn't fall within any of the recognized categories—except, of course, "British." The "Harvesters" (1894) is a big composition (24 inches by 36 inches), owing a lot to Turner's brushwork and palette, although the actual picture doesn't suggest Turner for a minute. Rays of pale yellow and red whirl in the front. The meadows blend into the sky so gradually that one barely sees the horizon. Perhaps it is not as unforgettable as a Rembrandt or a Leonardo da Vinci, but it is as good as the work of many post-Impressionists, such as that of Maxime Maufra or Gustave Loiseau, which is worth more at auction.

The two latest prices on record for a McTaggart are $1,008 paid on April 20, 1968, at Sotheby's sale at Gleneagles Hotel, Edinburgh, for a summer landscape (27 1/3 inches by 39 1/2 inches); and, again, $1,008, paid Oct. 30 at Christie's in London for an 1893 painting titled "Howgate" (23 inches

Equally inexpensive are paintings by Philip Wilson Street, who was active from the 1890s antil after World War L. His view of Barnard Castle (19 inches by 23 1/4 inches) fetched $1,800 on July 17, 1968, at Sotheby's. In next Friday's sale is a lovely landscape of low hills and cloudy sky, painted in 1910 in dotty strokes, going back to Constable's manner. This work is unlikely to fetch more than $3,000 to $4,000. In my opinion, it is well worth having at that price.

To those who do not intend to buy, the Christie's sale may be quite interesting all the same. There are some rare and strange landscapes by Robert Bevan, who painted at Pont-Aven, among other places. This work is a hang-over from pointillism, but with wild colors. Lawrence-Stephen Lowry, whose more important work dates from 1920 to 1950, painted in a bleak expressionistic mood. He is represented in the sale by one of his best achievements, a landscape in black, white and red. Already recognized by number of collectors, his paintings are in a higher price range, $2,000 to $10,000, depending

*Even so, Lowry's works, like those of other earlier British artists, belong to an art market category that has not yet become highly speculative and is therefore accessible to the discerning

THEATER IN LONDON.

Joan Littlewood's 'The Projector'—'Pretty Pointless'

By John Walker .

ONDON, Dec. 4.—Joan Littlewood's new production "The Projector" at the Theatre Royal, Stratford East, is both a curiosity and a disappointment. Much in the style of "The Beggar's Opera," It purports to be a comic opera, written by one William Rufus Chetwood In 1733. According to the program, it satirized a London builder of shoddy tenements, who was known as Tumbledown Dick, and closed after one night when he hired ruffians to attack the stage.

Miss Littlewood has said that she chose the play as a method of avoiding libel suits and obli-quely dealing with the Ronan Point disaster of 1968, when a tower block of flats, not far from her theater, collapsed, kill-ing three people. In the event, her 18th-century pastiche seems to have no relevance to the modern tragedy. The production is likely to offend only the Gay Liberation front, for much of the evening is given over to homosexual stereotypes with the pursuit of a young worker by an elderly roue, Lord Aimwell, who is known to his intimates as Belinda.

The rest of the plot is as simple-minded. Van Clysterpump, the rascally Dutch builder, erects tenements of inferior material in the first act. When they collapse in the second act. he blames the disaster on a workman, and by judicious bribery maintains his own respectability.

I have many doubts about the whole enterprise. I'm not even sure whether Mr. Chetwood ever existed. If he did. then I doubt whether he wrote "The Projector," which is subtitled "The Mock Mason" and acts like a mock play of the period. If he did, then I doubt whether it bore much resemblance to Miss Littlewood's ver-

The second act, in particular, is played as a broad parody. One of the conventions of the period was that the poor but honest hero was finally identified as a nobleman's son by means of a birthmark, "The Projector" ends with a plethora of birthmarks: A where discovers that her husband is a lord. The lord finds out that his lover is his son. His son discovers that his lover is his

"The pleasure of the evening lies in seeing a great sister. It all seems more in keeping with 20th-century preoccupations.

There is some dancing, and the singing of 25 songs which successfully interrupt the action and keep the plot to a minimum. The satire is on the level of such lines as "we will build in the Hanseatic style, etraight up, take the money, and run like the wind."

Only two scenes achieve any comic style. The first is a masked bell that leads into a hilarious love song for four. "My Hand, My Heart," which ends with the two men leaving hand in hand. The second is the wistful "Sleep, Sweet My Sister," sung by Jenny Logan after the collapse of a tene-cuted?" asks Lord Aimwell. It may be recalled that Dr. Johnson, the great philosopher of the period, used to praise people by saying that they had "bottom," a metaphor derived from ships, denoting courage and solldity. In the context of Ronan Point, on which Miss Littlewood lays stress, "The Projector." for all its fundamental fooling, lacks bottom. The production is undeniably pretty-a word I never thought I'd use in connection with theater workshop—but pretty pointless.

How to start benefiting from investment management

with as little as $5,000

If the money you have today is to grow in the future toward more income, or for education, travel, leisure, retirement, it must be kept working full time to achieve your goals. Yet you may find that you are actually losing ground due to inflation, taxes or lack of time for investment decisions. To help solve this problem, clients in 55 countries have turned to The Dapforth Associates Investment Management Plan. It has, we believe, proved especially efficient in proof from $5,000 to $50,000 -on behalf of people who recognize and can share the risks and rewards of common stock investments. The cost is modest, as low as $100 per year.

For a complimentary copy of a 42-page report describing this tested plan, its complete 10-year "performance record," and how it may help you now, simply write Dept. N.36.

Economic Analysis

U.S. Needs Inflationary Restraints

By Hobart Rowen

WASHINGTON (WP).—The second U.S. "inflation alert," like the first in August, is an excellent diagnosis of the origin and status of wage-price excesses. Unlike the first, it is more direct in suggesting that old business and big labor can kill the goose that lays all the golden eggs if they continue to be greedy.

Moreover, Paul W. McCracken, chairman of the President's Council of Economic Advisers, and his associates were gutsy enough to blast both the Railroad Emergency Board and the Texas Railroad Commission for actions (on rail wages and oil production) that contributed to the wage-

Still, the alert falls short of recommending what is needed at this critical stage of the economy, and that is a government policy that might restrain unions and companies (and government boards) from pursuing inflationary wage and price behavior.

By Whatever Name, It's Begun

Whether or not you choose to call it by that name, the "jawboning" process has once again begun. The problem is that in between the CEA's public exposures of what is happening prices and wages go up unimpeded.

For example, since the August slert pointed out that home heating fuel prices were skyrocketing, the price of this oil has gone up 25 percent. What happens if this pattern continues? Mr. McCracken left the impression that if the low, low-key appeals for voluntary restraint fail, stronger medicine may finally be administered. "This is a little sharper and a little more pointed than the last [inflation alert] and I don't know where the trend will go," Mr. McCracken told a White House briefing. Clearly, the Nixon administration is engaged in an internal struggle on how to match the need for cutting short the wage-price spiral with its Republican commitment to emphasis on private market decision-making.

Defining the Market Problem But the problem, as the alert itself details, is that the so-called free market is not a single monolith that moves in classic response to supply and demand. Some wages and prices have not caught up to the gains of others, and the "catchup" effort is the key factor behind inflation at a time of slack in the economy.

The trick of brenking the spiral is to interrupt the "catch-up" process. As Mr. McCracken said, this will be unfair to these who come along later and get smaller wage or price boosts than those who got theirs earlier.

The difference between the administration and its critics is no longer on the analysis of the proolem, but in what should be done. Mr. Nixon and Mr. McCracken are still betting on the free market plus a little more jawboning. Others say that controls of one degree or another will be

One could read into recent comments by Mr. McCracken a plea for an intermediate step — a social bargain or compact" for more restraint on

There would be no formal controls, Mr. Me-Cracken says, but a sort of "rule of the house" that the object would be to promote wage and price stability. In turn, that would let the gov-ernment push more confidently for fiscal and monetary expansion to eliminate economic slack. But this demands the kind of restraint or statesmanship that is difficult to demand unless the "rule of the house" is a standard or yardstick that can tell labor leaders and company presidents what is expected of them.

Many bankers are predicting that the prime rate—the minimum charge on loans to the most creditworthy companies—will drop again before the end of the year. The rate, now at 7 percent, has been educed four times so far in 1970. The weekly Federal Reserve statement showed that the heavy deficit in the U.S. balance of payments, as measured on the official settlements basis, was continuing without letur.

Marketable government securities held in custody by the Fed for foreign central banks increased $196 million during the week for a cumulative rise of $2.5 billion since early September, and more than $5.5 billion over the same date a Year ago.

As U.S. interest rates have de clined, banks have reduced substantially their reliance on the Eurodollar market as a source of funds. And as these borrowings have been repaid, much of the money has flowed into foreign central banks.

NORMAN ROCKWELL Artist and Illustrator

By Thomas S. Buechner. Illustrated. Abrams. 32

Reviewed by Jean Stafford WHEN the Saturday Evening and the Nassau

Post gave up the ghost in 1969, Norman Rockwell, its star performer, commemorated the death in the Atlantic Monthly with a portrait of Benjamin Franklin weeping. Three plump tears lie upon the old sonl's cheeks and lines of desolation furrow his brow and draw down the corners of his mouth. But the beholder is not meant to grieve. There is to be a gentle tug at the heartstrings, a small lump in the throat, but no serlous involvement: It is a study in poignance, Rockwell's reliable stock in trade for 60 years. He had, financially at least, no personal cause to mourn the demise of the Post for he had left it in 1963 and had gone to work for Look; and such is his unflagging industry and such his abid-ing popularity that so long as he can hold a paintbrush he will never want for a market.

This huge album of more than 600 representative specimens of his work is a pictorial history of average America in the 20th century. Thomas S. Buechner, the director of the Brooklyn Museum, in his introduction says that he agreed to amage the collection and to comment on it because he thinks Rockwell is important:

"He may not be important as an artist-whatever that is-but he has given us a body of work which is unsurpassed in the richness and variety of its subject matter and in the profes-sionalism—often brilliant—of its execution. Unlike many of his colleagues (painters with publishers instead of galleries) he lives in and for his work and so he makes it important" Considering the size of tha corpus, one wonders whether he has ever had time for anything else since he became prodigiously successful before he was twenty. During the 47 years of his association with the Post, he produced 317 covers, using such sure-fire subjects as Thanksgiving dinner when several generations foregather to eat turkey with giblet gravy. circus parades, budding love, bandaged big toes, Pickwickian merrie gentlemen singing Christmas carols. Scrupulously loyal to reality, he assembles authentic props (celery dishes, spittoons, bonnels, tongue depressors) and to a considerable extent he is dependent on photography.

Besides his affirmative, homespun contributions to the Post, Rockwell painted covers for Boy's Life, Collier's, St. Nicho-las, The Ladies' Home Journal, Country Gentleman. The contents were as wholesome as the wrappers and John Public read P.G. Wodehouse, Arthur Somers Roche, Albert Payson Terhune, Booth Tarkington. Clarence Buddington Kelland Octavus Ray Cohen. Rockwell illustrated stories for all these magazines and more; he has painted advertisements for blameless and solidly American products, for Orange Crush and Coca-Cola, Parker pens, Maxwell House coffee, Overland cars equipped with Fisk tires, he has made greeting cards for Hallmark. He has painted portraits of all presidential candidates since 1951. He has painted murals for life insurance comPrinceton. The original Liberty Bell is now on view in Independence Hall, Philadelphia.

53 Liberty Bells With a French Accent

By Grace Wing Bohné

NNECY, France.-If the Liberty Bell replicas that rest on statehouse lawns across the United States could indeed "proclaim Liberty throughout the land," as their inscriptions read, the accent would be French.

The one-ton, lifesize copies of the origingl Liberty Bell were gifts to the states from the federal government in 1950. They are exact copies even to the tone famous crack scar.

But the bells were made at Annecy, high in the French Alps, in a bell loundry that dates from 1798 when the United States of America and the Republic of Prance were both fledgling nations.

Along with Alpine scenery, and chocolates made in their image, bells are Annecy's most important product. The glow in the night sky, when molten metal was being poured at the Paccard family's foundry across the lake, gave Annecy a son el lumière spectacle many years before other places went in for tourist pageantry.

When the Paccards were commissioned to make the Liberty Bell replicas 20 years ago, to be used as symbols for a nationwide U.S. Savings Bond sales drive, American metal refining interests picked up the tab as a patriotic gift. The bells were dedicated on May 15, 1950, in ceremonies in Philadelphia, John W. Snyder, then secretary of state, struck a note on the original Liberty Bell, then an identical note un a French-made duplicate.

In the following weeks the bells were dispatched across the country in red. white and blue trucks, each touring a state or territory. Permanent location for each bell was left up to the governors. Most are installed on or near the state capitol grounds.

The pilot model occupies a place of honor on the rustic premises of the Pac-card foundry at Annecy-le-Vieux. Members of the family have always lived nearby and surrounding atreets are named for them.

"America has many of our bells," said Pierre Paccard, the seventh-generation understudy in an unbroken father-to-son chain of command. "We have made cardions for Stanford and Princeton and other universities and a bell for the New York World's Fair.".

The Paccard masterpieces are La Savoyarde (Annecy is in Haute-Savoie).

Pierre Paccard is a muscular man of 22, serious-looking behind his glasses until he flashes a quick grin. His father, Alfred Paccard, 60, is head of the firm. They are in no danger of running out of executive talent because Pierre has two small sons and a daughter.

In a steel frame in the open air hangs a two-octave carlilon. Pierre seized a rock the size of a cantelonpe and, dashing back and forth, bonged out the Big Ben theme. One of these days, he said wishfully, he will wire the carillon so it can be played properly. Back in 1793. Pierre said, the little commune of Quintal, near Annecy, needed bells. The 'mayor, who was Pierre's ancestor, brought in a founder from a town near Geneva.

"In those days it was easler to hire a founder than to move bells," he said. "The founder needed an assistant so the mayor, who happened to be a master smith, obliged. When my forefather had learned to make bells he started this

Mr. Snyder recalls visiting the Paccards to witness the "pouring" of the Liberty Bells. Their foundry was chosen, he said, because the ancient techniques of the belimaker's art were still being practiced there by hand and because could do the job in the rather short

In all, 53 bells were made—one for each state, plus Alaska, Hawaii and Puerto Rico, one for former President Harry S Truman, which is now at the Truman Library in Independence, Mo., and one for Washington, D. C. The latter is at the west entrance to the Treasury Building facing the White House.

For the record the original Liberty Bell in Independence Hall at Philadel-phia was cast in London in 1753. It cracked tolling a farewell to Chief Justice John Marshall in 1835, was repaired, cracked mortally on Washington's Birthday in 1846.)

Echoes are made and sold by the pound in the bell foundry, since size and weight determine the tune as well as the cost. The founder hears the bell in his head while it is still on the drawing board, A one-ton bell, Pierre Paccard explained, would cost about 19 francs 1$3.431 per kilogram at current rates, or approximately $3,100.

A bell is conceived and molded toward an ideal, but the tone at first may not ring true. Tuning is a delicate art. Matal is shaved from the inside of the bell, over and over, ever so dettly, as the tone is checked against a tuning fork.

What sounds like a simple, deep bong to the untrained ear is actually a complex mixture of nvertones which must be refined to purity. In a carillon or any group of bells each me must be timed to harmonize with the rest. A tone, is described in a letters-and-numbers for mula, like a chemical compound, and hence may be suplicated at long distance.

Bells are mainly bronze with 22 pereent tin, the metals imported from Africa, Southeast Asia and South America "When there are troubles in the world we cannot get the metals readily, prices go up, up, and it is all very bad for the bells," Pierre mourned.

Sam White, the London Evening Standard's Paris-based columnist, reported from Brussels yesterday and heartily wished himself back in Paris. Brussels, he wrote, "is a capital where an unrestrained and allconsuming greed reigns over a wasteland of ugliness ... Its principal quality is that of a hideous Philistine cosmopolitanism ... There are no Imodern buildings worthy of note] apart from the headquarters of the Lambert Bank. The rest is so shoddy that it gives the impression it will disintegrate in French actress Marina Vlady. 3 married Russian actor-singer Vladimir Vysotsky, 32, in Moscow this week, friends have dis-closed. The groom, popular among young Russians who dig him on unofficial tape recordings, is the star actor of Moscow's ayant-garde Taganka Theater, and is currently re-hearsing to play Hamlet. Also wed: Ann Rockefeller Pierson. 36, daughter of the governor of New York, and Lionel Coste fr., of New Orleans, currently an architect based in New York City. Mrs. Coste was formerly married to an activist minister and has four children.

Lord Snowdon, husband of Princess Margaret, may take up commercial television photography and return to commercial advertising after a ten-year absence, a photographers' agent said yesterday in London. Peter Russell, a partner with David Putnam, who handles high-fash-ion photographers David Bailey and Clive Arrowsmith, said Lord Snowdon was "like a man who's discovered he's got two arms and has been using only one."
"We'll be putting ideas to him and he'll choose what he wants to do," continued Enssell. "There is, of course, the problem that he musn't be seen to be endors." ing the products just because he's photographing them. The subject matter will have to be in good taste." Since he married the princess in 1960, Lord Snowdon has kept up his photography but has avoided advertising work.

Prince Filippo Napoleone Or-sini, once one of the two highest-ranking princes of the papal-appointed "Black Nobil-ity" (since abolished), who lost his post allegedly because of his dolee vita romance with the late actress Belinda Lee announced yesterday that he is filing for divorce from his estranged wife Princess Franca Bonacossi Orsini who was granted a legal separation in 1962 on grounds that the prince was living with Miss Lee. The "Black Prince" thus becomes one of Italy's first public figures to seek a legal end to his marriage. "I have thought at great length before making this decision," said the prince, "not only because my family is by tradition Catholic of strict observance and bound for many reasons to the pontiff, but also because I myself am deeply Catholic, But I cannot fail to be astonished that the church, which does not recognize the a such importance to their dissolution ..." * * *

The Marquess of Londonder ry, 33, was granted a divorce sterday in London on grounds that the 29-year-old marchioness committed adultery with pop-singer Georgie Fame. Neither? the marchioness, the former Nicolette Elaine Katherine Harrison, nor Fame contested the action.
